

South Big Horn County Hospital District is taking many measures to protect the health of our staff, patients and residents during this pandemic. Our staff has had many hours of training and reinforcement on measures to maintain sanitary environments and prevent the spread of any disease. We disinfect rooms after treatment, we are cleaning all work areas routinely throughout the day and we disinfect any item given to patients. We want our patients to know we are a safe environment to come into to receive care. We are still open to treat and care for any health concern a patient may have, including suspected COVID-19 symptoms.

Many businesses in our area have been hit very hard from this pandemic and our healthcare facility is in that mix. We have seen a dramatic drop in the number of patients who come to use our services. We want to remind patients you still need to take care of your regular routine healthcare needs and do not put that care on hold. We want to remind our community we are still here for you; we are still open and we want to help you with any health concern you may have.
